Dear Friends,

After considerable soul searching over the past few years, I've come to recognize my good fortune; I grew up in a close-knit family that instilled a clear set of values, savor time with my own family, enjoy long-standing friendships, and have a unique vantage point from which to witness the inner workings of the investment and advisory services businesses.

Yet, it is difficult to find discreet, empathetic help managing the mosaic of human and financial complexities that confronts our lives. The challenge lies in identifying unfiltered perspectives that are objective and sound rather than commercially motivated. The matter becomes further complicated as we encounter the next half century. The future convergence of personal, social and financial dynamics will require each of us to reconsider our priorities and risk tolerances.

Digging deeper into understanding my own priorities, I became determined to create something new; for myself, my family and those who want to sort through the mixed signals. It seemed like a good time to stand things on their head a bit. I set out to create a business that emphasizes objectivity, broad-based planning, aligned incentives, appropriate fees and risk-based investment considerations, where intra-family relationships supersede every financial decision. RayLign was conceived to benefit families who choose to safely negotiate the big bends in the road — the ones that really matter — and avoid fixating solely on the financial speedometer.

I think you'll find that my capabilities and fresh approach to facilitating effective family decisions make a real difference — with real results.
